The basic morphology of plants reflects their evolutionary history as terrestrial organisms. The algal ancestors of plants were bathed in a solution of water and minerals, including bicarbonate, the source of carbon dioxide for photosynthesis in aquatic habitats. In contrast, the resources a terrestrial plant needs are divided between the soil and air, and the plant must inhabit these two very different environments at the same time. Soil provides water and minerals, but air is the main source of carbon dioxide, and light does not penetrate far into the soil. The evolutionary solution to this separation of resources was differentiation of the plant body into two main systems: a subterranean root system and aerial shoot system consisting of stems, leaves and flowers. Neither system can live without the other. Lacking chloroplasts and living in the dark, roots would starve without sugar and other organic nutrients imported from the photosynthetic tissues of the shoot system. Conversely, the shoot system depends on water and minerals absorbed from the soil by roots.

1. The ancestors of plants used nutrients from the:
a. soil b. air
c. water d. algae
2. A terrestrial plant lives in the:
a. soil b. air
c. water d. soil and air
3. The plant's evolutionary solution was:
a. assimilation b. photosynthesis
c. organic d. differentiation
4. The two main plant systems are:
a. stems and leaves
b. roots and shoots
c. chloroplasts and roots
d. flowers and roots
5. The two plant systems:
a. require each other b. are independent
c. lack chloroplasts d. are subterranean

Estrogern Is it for you?

This little pill can keep a woman young, but for some it's risky.

When a new patient strode into the office of gynecologist Robert A Wilson in the early 1960s, he could hardly believe his eyes "Mrs. P. G." as he later called her, was 52 years old, but she had the smooth skin and youthful body of woman half her age.

Asked about menopause, Mrs. P.G. laughed and replied, Dr. Wilson, I have never yet1..... a period. I'm so regular,2..... could use me for timing the moon. She later revealed that she was3..... birth-control pills containing estrogen and a second female hormone, progesterone.

The patient was a walking, talking confirmation of Wilson's most deeply held medicine4..... that treating menopausal women with female hormones could actually prevent menopause and the "fast and painful aging process" that attend it. Three years later, Wilson's best selling book, Feminine forever, announced the good news to all women.

Since then, estrogen-either alone or combined with other hormones in a treatment known as hormones replacement ...5... has indeed become the closest thing in a modern medicine to a woman's ...6.... of youth. "I have a hunch that I'll remain on HRT for the rest of my life, says Frida, a university instructor in her early 70s who feels that estrogen gives her "more energy" and a more ...7....appearance.
